Coleman Of C. P. R. Peeved At Callaghan Of Alberta Gov't.

Coleman of the C.P.R. is quite peeved with John Callaghan who is Deputy Minister of Railways and Telephones of the Farmers' Government at Edmonton

It appears that the Deputy Minister had a lot to find fault with in the way, he says, that the C.P.R. have been doing and not doing things on the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway which they have been managing for the Alberta Gov't

Coleman has just been slamming back at Callaghan and now all the people are very interested and on tiptoes looking to see what kind of "return slamming" Callaghan will dose
Coleman with—It looks as though Coleman has caught a Tartar

Latest reports are that the Farmer Members are backing up Callaghan—and they are Not pleased with the explanation made to the Legislature last Tuesday by Greenfield, they look upon it as an "Apology" to the Canadian Pacific Railway and they want to know "When did the C. P. R.
start to run the Farmers' Government of Alberta?"

An Abject Apology

J. R. Boyle declared that Premier Greenfield had made an "Abject Apology" to the C.P.R. and that the Cabinet of the Farmers' Government had a Row between themselves and did not want the Public to know about it

Boyle acts up to his name, he sure keeps things (Boyle-ing)

Child Swallowed $4,000 Diamond; And Choked to Death

GENEVA, March 19.—A Swiss dealer in precious stones named Dingler, who has just returned to Zurich from Paris, while playing with his five-year-old daughter and showing her cases of diamonds, rubies and sapphires, suddenly was called to the telephone.

When he returned the child was choking. She had swallowed gems worth $4,000. A doctor was called, but the little girl was dead, having been strangled by a diamond which entered the thorax.

The negotiations were carried on by the committee of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employees. Seventeen hundred men from Fort William to Victoria are affected by the award.

DISCOVERED KRUGER'S GOLD South Africa Greatly Excited Over Report of Unearthing of Vast Sum of Gold

LONDON.—South Africa is greatly excited over the reported discovery in the Petersburg district of a vast sum of gold which Paul Kruger, late president of the Transvaal, is said to have buried in the course of his flight to Delagoa Bay and Europe about 20 years ago to escape capture by the British.

The Johannesburg Correspondent of the Times who sends the story, says that the gold bars and coins, comprising part of the fortune of Kruger, have been recovered and that the police have gone to investigate.

Recovery of the fabled fortune of Paul Kruger, who left an estate valued at $3,750,000, has been the goal of adventurers and commercial syndicates for some time. More than three million dollars in gold representing the bulk of Kruger's money was cemented in the hold of the bark Dorothea, which sank on Tenedos reef off the Zululand coast about 20 years ago.

Another English Estate Offered for Sale

LONDON.—Strawberry Hill Castle, the home of the famous 18th century wit and dilettante, Horace Walpole, has been placed on the market. The castle is situated near Twickenham, made famous as the residence of Alexander Pope and David Garrick.

"I am going" Walpole wrote "to build a little Gothic castle at Strawberry Hill." It became the chief occupation of his life, and for twenty years from 1759 to 1770, he was constantly adding to it.

The castle, as a result, is one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in England.

Famous War Exploit, Blew Up Mountain "Eye" Of Austrians

Italian Ambassador Was "Slag Car Pusher" in a Utah Mine

New York.—Prince Gelasio Caetani, in a recent address here recounted for the first time details of his famous war exploit—the blowing up of the mountain Col di Lana, the "eye" of the Austrian army in 1916.

Addressing the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, Ambassador Caetani, who was graduated from Columbia and obtained his first job as "slag car pusher" in the works of the Daly West Mine, Park City, Utah, spoke modestly of his feat.

He said two other engineers, Bonifolo and Grimaldi, had contributed equally to the success of the mining of Col di Lana, a cone shaped mountain in the Dolomite Alps, 9,000 feet in height. "Col di Lana was the eye of the enemy," he said, "that spoiled every road of access, that looked over our defenses and our rail. We were called upon to blind that eye. An assault was ordered. And in the attempt to scale the bare and precipitous flank of the mountain, 10,000 of our bravest men met death. "Col di Lana had the voracity of a jaw crusher."

Then Prince Caetani, an officer of engineers, was sent to the sector to replace an officer who had fallen in the assault. He joined the Italian party on the mountainside, but—

"We had almost reached the peak; we hung with our fingers and shoe nails on the ice cliffs, but try as we might we could not make that last step," he continued. "Time and again our plucky little men tried to rush the gap, but machine-guns moved them down and their bodies remained in a frigid No-Man's-Land."

"One day Colonel Perelli asked me what I thought could be done. I told him we ought to get underneath them and blow 'em off. And so the mine was started, the thirteenth of January."

"We worked three months. There were two engineer officers, Bonifolo and Grimaldi, besides myself, and 80 picked miners. We started surveying the position, a difficult task, through loop holes.

"Finally we started tunnelling towards the center of the peak. We bored 150 feet, then drove a 42 degree raise with the intention of getting close to the surface under the enemy's first line trench.

"Upon the suggestion of two of our miners we had an 18-foot sectional woodwedge forged. The rock was soft and decomposed. From the foot of the raise we drilled almost vertically until we broke through to the surface. By that time the Austrian sentries were feeling our blasts under their feet. They notified headquarters that we were mining the Austrian position. Headquarters answered not to get caustically excited; that the Italians were probably only mining for shelter. They lost three days planning up and down, and to this we owed our success.

"Towards the middle of March the enemy started counter-mining. We had started again drifting horizontally and were gaining depth. On the seventh of April the enemy blasted its little countermin, but the shot had been placed too high and was somewhat off line. The shock, however, was very heavy and part of the ceiling of our tunnel caved, burying Bonifolo and four soldiers. We got them out alive and started again.

"The enemy then sank three shafts trying to locate us but we had gained further depth and passed under their shaft at no more than three feet distance. We could hear them walking and dragging bags full of dirt.

"April 15 we loaded five tons of 95 per cent. gelatine in two chambers about thirty feet apart and tamped the galleries.

"At 10 p.m. April 17th I went up for the last time in the raise and connected the electric wires. I was alone and in the silence of the underground world could hear someone picking hard and hastily above my head. That same night a prisoner told me that they would have fired their counter mine three days later.

"At 11 p.m. all our garrison was withdrawn into several galleries. The last sentries were retired shortly afterwards.

Our trenches remained for a moment, completely deserted.
"Bonifolo, Grimaldi and I and another officer were seated at the entrance of a gallery, 300 feet from the centre of the mine. At 11:30 we received orders and pulled the strings of the detonators.

"There was a dull noise, a slight tremor. I thought the mine had failed and rushed to the nearby entrance, illuminated by the white glare of the moon, when suddenly all became dark. A cataclysm of earth and rock fell. When the stones stopped falling I crawled out of the half obstructed entrance. The snow cap of Col di Lana had become black. The whole topography had changed. Everything was silent, deserted, dead.

"Our soldiers crawled out of the galleries, walked quietly up to the peak and occupied the huge crater. Col di Lana was ours!"

WINNIPEG'S HISTORICAL MUSEUM

1 and 2—Corners in the Hudson's Bay Company's historical museum at Winnipeg. 3—An old-fashioned turn-spit, on which for many years the roasts were cooked at the H.B.C. port at York Factory. 4—A model of the "Nonsuch," the ship that brought the first H.B.C. adventurers to Canada.

FOR a comparatively young city, Winnipeg has many points of interest. None is more worthy of a visit than the historical museum that has there been established by the Hudson's Bay Company. The great company's history is the history of Canada's West, and no institution is better equipped to present the earliest history of that land in the manner that the Hudson's Bay Company has chosen.

The value of museums as an educational agency is now only beginning to be more generally realized. What book or series of books could give so comprehensive, so vivid or so unforgettably correct a view of the world's past ages as a few days spent among the treasures of the British Museum. The idea grows in Canada as educational facilities grow. McGill University has its fine museum and the Royal Ontario Museum at Toronto. It will surprise many to know, is one of the world's finest. Its already splendid buildings, soon to be enlarged, is overcrowded with a wonderful store of historic treasures which visiting scholars from abroad never fail to visit.

The object of the Winnipeg exhibit is to depict by means of relics, pictures, documents, models, etc., the history of the Hudson's Bay Company, the life of the fur trade, the story of the pioneer settlers and the customs, dress and industries of the aboriginal tribes. The exhibit is at present set up at the company's store at Winnipeg, and while not nearly as large as it may be expected to become, already occupies a series of rooms in that establishment. The following principal divisions of the exhibit have been made for convenience: Early History, Furs, Indians, Life in the Service, Furs, Fashions and Stories, Fights and Wars, Land and Settlement.

From the time the natives of Hudson Bay welcomed the first H.B.C. ship in 1668 the Company has been on intimate and friendly terms with the Indians, and the exhibit of Indian relics will thus be of unique interest. This will be of all the greater value since Indian skill is handicraft is even now almost only a memory of past days. The other sections of the museum will tell the tale of the entry of the white man into the West, and the up-building of isolated trading posts that have become important and fast growing cities.

The photographs reproduced here with give an excellent idea of the splendid beginning this exhibit has made. One item of particular interest is the splendidly built model of the "Nonsuch" which, the first Hudson's Bay Company ship to arrive in Canadian waters, Prince Rupert and associates outfitted two ships, the "Eagle" and the "Nonsuch." These ships sailed from Greenwell, on the Thames, near London, in June, 1668. The "Eagle" turned back from a point near Hudson Strait, but the "Nonsuch" proceeded and on September 20th, 1668, anchored in the South of James Bay. Then and there a fort was built and named Fort Charles, and the river flowing into the Bay was named Rupert's River. Owing to the cargo of furs brought back by the "Nonsuch" in the summer of 1669, a charter for trading rights was applied for and resulted in the charter granted by King Charles the Second, on May 2nd, 1670, to Prince Rupert and his associates forming the "Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay." And thus began the great Company.

The exhibit includes a large number of important and exceedingly interesting documents and maps, as well as a large collection of tools, household utensils, and weapons of bygone days.

The latter history of Western Canada is the history of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the building of which resulted in the creation of a nation west of the Great Lakes, and these two great institutions are still at work at their task of nation building, and preserving the history of Canada's past. The Canadian Pacific has also established an historical museum at Lake Windermere, B.C. in memory of David Thompson, the explorer of the Rockies.

THE QUEBEC DOG DERBY

(1) Winning team of Quebec Dog Derby—(2) Spectators at the course—(3) Jean Lebell, the winner, receives the prize from Mayor Samson.

THE racing of dog teams in sleighs is probably not an ancient form of sport, and more probably still, it is a sport that came first into being in our own country. It is pretty sure that prehistoric man had his friendly dogs to help him run down his game, and warn him of the approach of enemies and perhaps served some small purpose as a beast of burden. Modern days have seen dogs hauling carts through the streets of European towns and when the white man first came to Canada the Indians of the plains harnessed him as they did their horses to a couple of poles on which were placed articles they wished to convey from one camp to another. In the Arctic the sleigh was the natural form of vehicle and the development of the husky from the wolf was the natural form of evolution. The dog performed a great work in the opening up of the North to civilization. Travel and trade depended entirely upon him and he did his work well. The natural instinct of the white man towards sport could only result in the development of dog team racing and the interest in the sport has spread until no winter carnival in Canada or the Northern States is complete without at least one dog race.

The Eastern International Dog Derby held in the ancient city of Quebec recently was a curious instance of the fascination this sport has for all kinds and conditions of men. Never since the days of the war were there gathered on the streets of that city such crowds as were there to see the dogs start and finish, and the dramatic incidents of the race were followed by crowds around the bulletin boards of the city as reports came in by telephone from various points along the route of the race. The race was run in three heats, the distance averaging 43 miles on each day which was by no means a hard day's work for the dogs. The total distance run was 131 miles, and the running time taken by the winning team was 15-30 hours. The race was won by Jean Lebell and his five dogs, a team belonging to the Brown Corporation of Quebec, and one that earns its livelihood by carrying mail and supplies into the companies northern camps. That is the bare story of the race, really enough told, but it is not so easy to tell of the tremendous interest taken in the race by the people of Quebec and the hundreds of visitors who had come from all over Canada and the United States to witness it. The Grande Allee, Quebec's show street, was every day lined with thousands of people in the dog start and finish, and if half the gamblers made are lived up to, another year will see hundreds of dog teams owned and trained by Quebec's citizens, purely for the love of the game. Jean Lebell, the winner, had undoubtedly the best team for that kind of race. Only one team could exactly describe them—they were mongrels, and there's much to be said for the mongrel if the breeds that make up his varied parentage are of the right sort. Jean Lebell's dogs were largely Great Danes, but here and there, there seemed to be a touch of the hound or even of the greyhound in them, and that may account for their speed. The one United States entry in the race was a magnificent team of huskies that owned Labrador as their original home. They were beautiful dogs, but they were not in good shape, perhaps the story of the race might have been different.

Each one of the three racing days the dogs came from the stables fresh and eager for the run. They set out on the course at ten minute intervals, and as each team shot away from the starting point it was given a splendid send-off. The finishers were much more exciting, and that of the last day was particularly so. On the first two days Lebell had finished first, although others of the eight competing teams had started ahead of him. On the final heat he started last, and would have finished first but for an unfortunate accident. Another Brown Corporation team, driven by Jim Skerene was the first to appear. It had started second, but passed the first early in the race, and Lebell followed about one minute behind. All through the series Lebell had saved his dogs by taking them out of the harness alternately and giving them a rest in the sleigh. He had made a bet that he would for the third time be the first in the stable. When about four miles from the finish and going strong one of his dogs suffered a cut foot. There was hard going ahead of that bet was to be won, but Lebell never flinched. The dog came out of the harness, his foot was bound up and, wrapped in Lebell's coat, he finished the rest of the journey in the sleigh, and if ever a dog looked ahead of himself as his comrades pulled to victory, that dog was the one. While Skerene beat Lebell in the finishing post, Lebell managed to get into the stable first, and so won his bet. Lebell is a French-Canadian with a fine war record. He and his dogs are inseparable chums, and when it comes to endurance, the man is about as good as the dog. He finished the race running beside his team and doing a good share of the pulling on the sleigh. He is today the hero of Quebec and the $1000 prize and other cash which he won is but a small part of the glory that fell to him.

Another international dog race is practically assured for Quebec next year. The Chateau Frontenac for this occasion holds a brilliant gathering of guests who were interested in the race, and some of these have announced that they will see all the United States is well represented.

Possible To Live To Be 125 Years Old

Claim Professor Seeks for Radio-Phosphate of Potash

LONDON.—Professor Burton Scammell, of the Dover Radio Institute, has discovered that by the use of radio-phosphate of potash, a man can be rejuvenated in a remarkable manner, according to Westminister Gazette's correspondent. It is claimed that as a result of the treatment a man can live to be 125; always feel as fresh as a daisy, and develop the square jaw which is an essential feature of the American movie hero

A retired banker of Worthingham gave in an interview a remarkable account of his mental and physical transformation as the result of taking discovery of Professor Scammell's discovery. This man, who is 77 years old, says his eyes are no stronger than they were 10 years ago. He can read without glasses his voice has become deeper and stronger, and he never experienced that "third feeling" any more

Railway News

Montreal—The Later and Abram Mapp, who were arrested at Montreal on August 24th, charged with giving money to C. F. H. conductors on the Ste. Agathe Subdivision for not collecting fares from parties of passengers, appeared before Judge Proulx on September 21st, and pleaded guilty to the charge, and were sentenced to pay a fine of $10 each and costs.

There are the first prosecutions made in Canada on this charge, which is covered by an amendment to the Criminal Code under section 418A, making it a criminal offence for giving or offering to give to conductors of any railway valuable consideration for not collecting fares from passengers travelling on trains.

CALGARY, Alta.—Blissner, a town on the C. P. R. and O. T. P., about 35 miles northeast of Calgary as the crow flies, is in the grip of an incipient silver boom. "On Saturday and Sunday men from the local district and from points afar, where the news spread with the usual rapidity of such tidings, staked out claims covering several sections about four miles east of the town. These were registered at the federal land office in Calgary. No assay has yet been made of the ore, but those interested in the property are sending a sample to Edmonton. It may be necessary to have another test hole. The fact is, before sufficient ore can be obtained to get a reliable assay. The original find was made by crews drilling for water and much of the first ore taken out has been given away as samples. The first find was made about three months ago.

Regina.—The Saskatchewan better farming train brought its highly successful tour to a conclusion recently and Mr. Williams, agricultural agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, expressed his belief that this train, the biggest yet operated, with the biggest attendance, also got bigger and better results than any of its predecessors. "Many times," said Professor Williams, the Agricultural Department of the College of Agriculture, who was on the train through the rural agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, "will be built as a result of the visit of the better farming train."

Professor Delby, who was lecturing on fruits and who was in charge of the dairy exhibit car, stated that in the southern and eastern parts of the province there is a very noticeable increase in the interest taken in cow testing work, and as a result of the tour of the train, he was convinced, will be that a very large number of dairymen will say complaining that the birds freeze the milk, he said, was not because the house was overcrowded, and the more hens there are the more mature comes from the considerable brood. A hen's temperature is 106, and she can stand the cold perfectly well, as long as the air is dry. The cotton fringed poultry house, with insulated walls and properly ventilated, has been found absolutely satisfactory at the College of Agriculture.

The total attendance for the tour was 32,381, and surpassed the former best on record by 107. The difference between this year and last year would have been many more had it not been for the fact that heavy rain spoiled the last day's attendance. The average daily attendance was 1,011, and the total attendance was 32,381. 8,975 men, 4,532 women, 15,971 boys and girls, and 2,959 babies.
